

After reading through the EDP document, I'm very concerned. This year my son enrolled in Matsumoto Elementary School, and we were told because the school was over its capacity, some of the children had to be transferred to another school, which is far from the home. Without more investing more into public service in this area, more houses means put more stress into these already crowded schools. And the result will be lower quality of education.

Children are our future. Better education is their best hope. I'd like to see this been address in the plan.
